

A review of the main evolutions of the future wireline and wireless next generation networks is presented looking at ultrabroadband aspects. The role of the QoS measurements in these contests and the difference among the line capacities offered by the ISP and the QoS perceived by the users. Results from the MPLANE project and description of Application SLA (ASLA).